TWO PERSONS were injured Wednesday night in this auto mishap on the Dutch Hill road, north of Warren, which happened about 7:45 p. m. Driver of the auto was Jack Collins, 16, of 8 Monroe st., who was traveling too fast for conditions when his auto missed a curve in the road, tore into a small embankment, and sheared off a tree. Damage to the 1954 Plymouth was estimated at $500. Collins suffered multiple lacerations of the face, and a passenger, Stephen Massa, Jr., age 16, 2 S. Irvine st., Warren, sustained a fractured nose in the mishap. Four other passengers escaped uninjured.

Fishing Tourney To Attract Many Anglers

The 1960 Pennsylvania championship of sports fishing is to be decided this week end in the stretch of the Allegheny River along the banks of the small river community of Tidioute. The Chamber of Commerce met there last evening to make final preparations for two big days of fishing Saturday and Sunday. Tomorrow morning, shortly after the fog has cleared the river, which has generally been around 8 a.m., hundreds of anglers will invade the Allegheny between the Irvine and West Hickory bridges. Reports of catches must be turned into the official weighing station at the Tidioute Water Co. before 10:30 p.m.

Sunday's fishing will be done by finalists selected after competition the previous day. Pounds and ounces of the catches will decide which fishermen are eligible to compete Sunday, but points will be distributed according to the prize species to determine the Pennsylvania champion in Sunday's fishing.

Contestants and referees will enter the Allegheny at the Wildwood resort, and will be permitted to fish south to Siggins Eddy, a stretch of water about eight miles long. The original course covers nearly a 30-mile section of the river. The Pennsylvania Fish Commission will patrol the course both days.

The point distribution for the prize species toward the state honors are as follows: Black Bass, two points; Walleyed pike, four points; Northern pike, fifteen points; and Muskellunge, twenty points. The angler who accumulates the most total points will gain the Pennsylvania State Championship and the right to compete in the World Series of Sports Fishing at Houghton Lake, Mich., Oct. 15-24.

The top fisher of the eight finalists will receive the Scott

Outboard Motor Co. trophy from Tidioute Burgess Elmer Peterson at 3:30 p.m. Sunday. The trophy stands 21-3/4 inches high, and will be a coveted award for the fishing efforts of some lucky Pennsylvanian.

Judges have announced that in the event of a tie, a fish-off or sudden death affair will be held. All referees will carry a set of the Pennsylvania fish laws and a measuring stick to avert any problems.

At last evening's meeting it was announced that prizes would also be awarded for the largest carp and bullhead catches as well as many other special awards.

For the enjoyment of contestants and sight-seers, music and the World Series game will be broadcast in the Tidioute boro streets.

You need not register to compete Saturday, but the state champion has to be a Pennsylvanian resident. We wish all of you the best of fishing.

Today and Tomorrow . . . ONLY THE FIRST WAVE

By Walter Lippmann

It is too early to be sure, but there are signs that the first wave of Mr. K.'s diplomatic offensive has passed its crest. There is no doubt that there will be a second wave but it may be that it will not come immediately, and that there will be an interval of comparative quiet in which to assess the situation.

If this proves to be correct, we can say that while Mr. K. has failed to conquer or to wreck the U. N., he has staged a powerful and significant demonstration against the status quo. His campaign is not over. Indeed it is just launched. And there is no time to be wasted in preparing our minds and our policies for the long conflict of which we have seen only the beginning.

On Monday, in the most revealing of all his speeches at the U. N., Mr. K. made clear what is behind the uproar he has been creating. It is that "the structure of the United Nations bodies," which was "normal," fifteen years ago, "is now out of date."

In 1945, when the U. N. was founded, the assumption was that the U. N. would be led by the five victorious big powers in World War II, that is to say by the Soviet Union, Kuomintang China, Great Britain, France, and the United States. Since 1945 the Soviet Union has become a very great power, Kuomintang China has collapsed on the Chinese mainland, and a billion people, formerly under colonial rule, have become independent.

The U. N., he asserts, reflects the power structure of the world in 1945 and not the power structure of the world today. His grievance is that the Security Council and in the Secretariat, the new powers that have risen since 1945 are not fairly represented. His object is to reform the U. N. -- or more specifically to reform the Security Council and the Secretariat -- in order that they may reflect the facts which are, he asserts, that "not only law and justice BUT FORCE TOO is on the side of 'the Communist orbit and the neutrals. The United States and its Western allies are, he asserts, still preponderant in the U. N. But they are no longer preponderant in the world.

Once again, as in his torrent of insults after the U-2, Mr. K. has overplayed his hand and has played it badly. For he has directed the brunt of his assault not at the undoubted weaknesses of the U. N. structure but at its strongest and most progressive and most inspiring success. This is the emergence of the office of Secretary General under Mr. Hammarskjold's brilliant direction as an indispensable protector of the peace among small nations.

Mr. Hammarskjold is not out of date but the composition of the Security Council is out of date. The bloc voting in which we have had so conspicuous a part has been abused in such matters as the Chinese representation, the election to the Presidency of the General Assembly, and the election of non-permanent members to the Security Council. But there is room for negotiation and for reform. But what is not negotiable is the one thing that Mr. K. has made the move of -- his proposal to abolish the Secretary General and to replace him by an inherently discordant committee.

Mr. K.'s mistake has been to attack the U. N. where it is least vulnerable, and because of that his support in the Assembly is small. He has in fact been repulsed, and apparently he knows it. For he is not pressing his demand about the Secretary General.

But, if we care about the future let us not think that Mr. K.'s mistake has been our success. Let us not sink into torpor and complacency until Mr. K. launches, as he surely will, the next wave of his campaign. The uproar in the General Assembly which evoked more sympathy among the delegates than they found it useful or expedient to acknowledge, should be treated as an alarm bell. It should warn us that the old American hegemony, of which Mr. Lodge loves to boast, is about over.

The time is now at hand when a statesmanlike reform of the U. N. will be imperative. The hurricane which Mr. K. brought to New York has not blown the roof off the house. But we had better mend the roof. For the storm is not over.

OBSERVATIONS

By Bob Walsh

WHAT WILL WE NAME IT?

With the public speakers doing their roadwork in preparation for their share of the vocal gymnastics that will be a part of dedication activities at the site of the dam above Warren, and even Dr. Morgan momentarily silenced, perhaps we should be training our sights on the nameplate which must be spiked into some portion of the cement about to be poured. This area has been calling it the Kinzua dam for twenty-two years, not out of consideration for the community about to be obliterated but because the "place of many fishes" is the closest town.

We are not sure that Kinzua is the right name for the dam, though we believe it is a good choice in view of the part played by the settlers who founded the community in 1821, five years after the first white man moved in. We do object to it being called Kinzwah as some misinformed linguists would pervert it. If we must go back to the Revolution, the name is Kenque, and you don't hardly find no "z" a'tall.

Some propose to call it the Cornplanter dam, and we have tried this out for size on a few occasions just to test reaction. The only response up to this moment is in the form of objections.

We think we have an answer which will do honor to all the deserving. Why not call it the Kinzua dam in memory of the early settlers who forged a civilization in this area, and remember the great chief who eased the way for progress by naming the resultant lake after him.

It would be the Kinzua dam and the Cornplanter lake, or reservoir.

No use asking to hear from you. We will!

PENNSYLVANIA PREJUDICE

Don't get your nose sighted in too strongly on the South and its narrow approach to the color problem. Pennsylvania finds it necessary to have a Fair Employment Practice Commission, and it has cases to handle. One steel mill employed six Negroes and seventeen others were given equal consideration as the result of complaints filed with the Commission.

Investigation in this case revealed that twenty-three Negro applications had been marked or grouped according to race. A study showed that all of the Negro applicants had technical and mechanical qualifications equal to or superior to many of the white applicants who were employed following the date of the Negro applications.

The steel mill now has agreed to cease marking applications according to race.

In another case a Negro woman was employed by a glass products company, its first, after the Commission learned it had been refusing to employ "colored" persons. Eighteen agencies were ordered to stop processing job orders on the basis of age.

The Commission also cracked down on three school districts which used teacher application forms containing illegal inquiries.

The airlines in Pennsylvania also have been under the eye of our Commission. Though they claim they do not consider applicants on any basis other than merit, no Negroes are employed among the 823 people working in the sales departments. There are sixty-nine among the 1,026 employees of the operations departments, but sixty-two of these are members of all-Negro porter units at two airports.

We can go on in greater detail, but most of us need go no further than ourselves to know that prejudice is prevalent far north of Dixie. They are just more honest about it.

OFF TO CIVIL WAR AGAIN?

There is an apparent major effort to make much of the Civil War Centennial next year. Those who constantly stew up a steam over Civil War memories and all objects and areas that descend from the actions of that tragic event seem to be perpetuating something that is best forgotten.

Why men fought in the Civil War perhaps might be eulogized but we find nothing about that conflict that enamors us. There certainly was a better way to free slaves, and the result was far from successful, as a look around these one hundred years later will reveal.

We have been fighting the war ever since it was supposedly finished, and the most controversial plank in the platform of a major party which now is engaged in a battle for the presidency is claimed to be too strong by many and the South at this late date is threatening to walk out of its party if it insists on fully "freeing the slaves".

It was a bloody, unnecessary war, matching the two halves of an allegedly civilized nation together in a series of brutal battles. Son fought father, father fought son, brother shot brother.

It is one of the gravest blots on our historical record. Unlike our Revolutionary War in which we fought for our freedom, and our other wars in which we have defended that freedom and the freedom of others, it did not provide true freedom for anyone, and the North which won through massive material advantages created an intolerable situation in the South which counteracted any possible good that might have been accomplished by the spilling of blood.

If there is any memory to be emphasized as a theme for such a centennial observance it should be the senseless characteristic of war and the depth to which men can stoop even in a civilized nation if they do not make every effort to settle their differences in peace.

"How Can We Trust A Man Who Is Prejudiced Against Crime?"

Bogey Men Not Near Kennedy

By Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON. -- In every national campaign bogeymen are trotted out well in advance of Halloween to try to scare the voters out of whatever wits they may have left after the barrage of oratory. As everything is this campaign is low in key--sometimes so low as to be almost inaudible--so the bogeymen are hardly up to past standards.

Vice-President Nixon has again and again said that the Democratic party is no longer the party of Thomas Jefferson. It has been captured, the Vice-President tells his audiences, by Schlesinger, Calbraith and Bowles.

Except for Chester Bowles, head of price administration at the end of the war, former Ambassador to India and Congressman from Connecticut, it is doubtful that most of his listeners know who the other two are. That is a measure of how hard pressed is a measure of how hard pressed the Republican campaigners are for really authentic flesh-creepers.

Arthur Schlesinger Jr. is a professor of history at Harvard who must surely be one of the most prolific authors since Anthony Trollope in the last century brought out his political novels in an unending stream. Besides the latest addition to his history of the Roosevelt era, "The Politics of Upheaval," Schlesinger has just brought out what the critics are saying is a cogent piece of political pamphleteering, "Kennedy or Nixon: Does It Make Any Difference?" It is a tract in refutation of the thesis that the two Presidential candidates are much alike, two cool cats, and so the voter would be well-advised to pick the man with the greater experience, Nixon.

Calbraith is a professor of economics at Harvard who happens to write in his field not in the conventional jargon of the economist but in the language that the average layman can understand. That is one reason his book, "The Affluent Society" stayed on the best-seller list so long. Calbraith sought in that book to puncture some time-worn myths about the American consumer and the needs, public and private, of a society that produces such wealth of gadgetry.

As for Bowles, he made a fortune in partnership with William Benton in the advertising business and then, 30 years ago, at an early age retired, as did Benton, to devote himself to public office and public causes. He has been one of the chief propagandists for a large-scale program of foreign aid and technical assistance to the underdeveloped countries. As Ambassador to India he helped to dramatize the needs of that country in pushing forward with plans for industrialization.

What gives those with even a little inside knowledge of the Kennedy campaign a much-needed laugh is the charge that these men have "captured" the Democratic party. The continuing and persistent complaint of many of the large stable of brain-trusters recruited both before and after the convention in Los Angeles is that they have no access to the candidate. The memoranda and speech drafts they prepare fall on barren ground, far short of the eye of the storm in which Senator Kennedy travels. This may be a major defect in the Kennedy campaign organization.

For many Democrats in the liberal-labor wing of the party the chief bogeyman is Senator

Barry Goldwater of Arizona. Goldwater is an old-fashioned ultra-conservative with modern improvements. He has indefatigable energy and a highly effective campaign technique. As one of the leading proponents of right-to-work laws, adopted by Arizona and many other states, he is anathema to organized labor.

His service to Nixon is, above all, in saying in the South to conservative Southerners what Nixon cannot say -- that states' rights are all important and that the Federal government has no business messing around in such local matters as segregation of the races. But aside from the sharp ideological differences it is hard to magnify him into a truly impressive flesh-creeper.

Schlesinger and Calbraith are intellectuals, and if intellect is to be stigmatized then perhaps they qualify. Schlesinger is often attacked for his role as one of the leaders of Americans for Democratic action. But since little is heard of ADA in this campaign, with its influence in the Democratic party relatively unimportant, this can hardly be cited as a major iniquity. Moreover, Kennedy has clearly identified himself as a New Dealer.

The campaign still has five weeks to run. It may be that as Halloween draws near the old ghosts and the familiar skeletons will once again be taken out of the closet. But the religious issue in its cruder manifestation -- a visit by the Pope to set up headquarters in Washington in anticipation of Kennedy's election -- has so plainly backfired that the spook specialists may hesitate. This is to be devoutly hoped for. It is enough to have Nikita Khrushchev playing alternately clown and ogre.

Matter of Fact . . .

THE KENNEDY CAMPAIGN

By Joseph Alsop

ENROUTE WITH KENNEDY

In the Kennedy campaign safari, the bouyancy, the optimism, the sense of being on a rising curve, are now so strong that they are all but tangible.

Maybe Sen. Kennedy and his people are deluding themselves. Maybe the Senator will fall flat on his face in the next television debate, although he looks as sure-footed as a clamors. But the atmosphere of a campaign entourage is always a meaningful fact. (Who can forget the significantly dank confusion around Adlai Stevenson in 1956?) So this new Kennedy atmosphere is at least worth recording.

This phase dates from before the first television debate--it began with Kennedy's triumphant reception in Cleveland, just before he went to Chicago. But the aftermath of the debate has increased the bouyancy, and it has also increased the warmth of the candidate's welcome by the crowds who turn out for him.

The crowds themselves have something to do with the buoyancy. One does not want to exaggerate. A lot of people in these Kennedy crowds would turn out for any Democrat. More would for any Democrat. More would turn out for any passing show. Yet you cannot doubt, all the same, that Kennedy has somehow captured the imaginations of enormous numbers of the American people.

The "jumpers," as the reporters on the safari call the young girls who leap up and down in groups at Kennedy's approach are the odd phenomenon in themselves. More remarkable still are the "touchers," the very considerable numbers of people, grown-up, hard-working people, who long to touch the candidate, as though he were imbued with some sort of valuable, transferable personal magic or private electricity.

One outwardly serious, sensible looking old lady was even heard shrieking to a friend, "I can't get near enough. I'll touch you and you touch him for me"--as though a current would thus flow from Kennedy through her friend to herself.

Some kind of current does seem to flow, some sort of exchange does seem to take place between Kennedy and the tens of thousands who daily come to see and hear him. The effect is most astonishing in one of the big amphitheaters like the one in Hibbing, Minnesota, where Kennedy had an audience of 12,000 in a town of 16,000.

The great cavernous space is filled, filled to the rafters, with people. The crowd is not ornamented, so to say, with banners, streamers and the like, for the Democrats are short of cash and have no dollars to spend for trimmings. The space, the crowd, the inevitable bands, the empty platform--that is all there is to it.

The lesser politicians file in first. There is an opening speech or two -- sometimes a more skillful speech than the main speech yet to come. Then through a side door, with aides flanking him to hold off the "touchers" who surge forward, Kennedy quietly enters. The instantaneous result is a thunder of cheers and you find yourself wondering what there is in this tall youthful-looking man with the shock of hair and the half-embarrassed smile to make him a master of men.

What follows is more curious still. Voice training has cured Kennedy of his former habit of speaking in a sustained unvarying shout. The new lower-pitched, more variable Kennedy voice is not agreeable anymore than the sound of bagpipes is agreeable, but like bagpipes, it can stir the blood. Standing rigidly erect, rarely smiling, even more rarely gesturing, with deadly seriousness, with little change of rhythm, with no pauses to invite applause, Kennedy speaks in this near, still harsh, but somehow stirring voice.

The speech is suited to the occasion and the audience. The construction is often disjointed. There are repetitions and sometimes there are blunders of phrasing. But the language is elevated, even literary, for this man is something of an artist with words, who has envolved a speaking style as personal as Adlai Stevenson's, and vastly more masculine.

The themes, by now, are all familiar. The promise of more generous welfare measures, the emphasis on the need for growth at home, the stern insistence on the need for greater power abroad --these notes that Kennedy strikes are standardized by now. Underlying the publicized themes, however, there are other things that have received less attention. There is an intense sense of this particular moment in history. There is a somber estimate of history's possible movement. And there is a desperate urgency about the measures to assure a decent future.

"These are somber times," he says, and there is no doubt he means it. The very fact that he means it combines with his visible, almost overly-visible, confidence in his own power to find a safe way through. It is this combination that moves the crowds, and makes the old women want to touch him.

It is a curious way to run for the Presidency and it may well not be a successful way. But it is interesting to watch.

BETTER TIMES

Those Notre Dame fans who have been as faithful down through the years as the Yankee-ites may find some consolation in retrospect after last Saturday's drubbing by Purdue. The Boiler-makers really boiled in the second quarter and the Irishmen had a taste of the medicine which their predecessors occasionally prescribed and delivered.

But there were better days, especially those under Knute Rockne whose teams won over one hundred games and lost only twelve. A book was published last week which is "the story of the greatest football coach who ever lived" and the title, of course, is "Knute Rockne".

The author is Francis Wallace, who has been doing a variety of writing for many years since his college days when he was student publicity director at Notre Dame. Mr. Rockne said that he knew of no one better qualified to write about modern football, especially that played at Notre Dame. Wallace attended all games, all practice sessions, and all lectures. In a written quiz on football strategy he finished second to Harry Struhldreher.

Those who relish the days when The Rock was turning out a new kind of football for the awed nation of sportsmen should enjoy this one and they also will learn the facts about many of the stories which have come out of the locker room and attendant areas during the coaching years of the man whose career was ended in a plane crash in 1931. THE PATHWAY

A challenging book is coming out the middle of October, written by Rev. W. Norman Pittenger, professor of Christian Apologetics at the General Theological Seminary. It is called "The Pathway to Believing" and offers such thought-provoking statements as, "Barbarism, superstition, and evil behavior—all of these have accompanied and resulted from religion". He says that all religions are not good just because they are religions. Nazism made a religious impact on millions.

In view of the ideologies that now are rampant and which may border on religious fervor, and because so many people are Christian in their chosen belief, yet are not firmly attached to any denomination, this book may offer some answers. It is intended to offer a pathway. At least it will make you pause to consider a subject vital to all of us.

It will cost only $2.95 and will be published by Bobbs - Merrill.

WINTER-SHORTENER

One way to melt those snow drifts away in quick fashion is to find enough interesting activities to roll the weeks past at a pace that at times will even seem a bit too rapid. The months fly by when you have a schedule loaded with pleasure-producing events, most of which require a personal effort on your part, which in turn is of a nature that involves a few hours of work in the preceding weeks.

Most people enjoy the theatre and a large number of Warren county residents travel to Chautauqua, Buffalo, Cleveland, and New York for live entertainment. In addition we have many others who attend the movies, and even more who sit nightly before the shimmering eye.

Obviously, most of us enjoy a good play. Unfortunately, few of us ever have much of a part in producing one. This is our loss and reduces our ability to fully appreciate the drama that we watch in whatever form we choose.

Most people will shrink from the thought of playing a part on the stage, and it would be impossible to get them under grease paint with anything less influential than a Bat Masterson. But there is more to a play than meets the audience and the hours so spent are happy ones that result in new friends and experiences. And new knowledge.

Newcomers to the community, or those who have been busily kept out of circulation, can find much companionship in play production. And the net result not only is satisfaction with entertaining others but also a much greater appreciation for any play you see, by film, airwave, or trip to a far city.

We mention this now because we have a going group in Warren which this season will produce four plays, including a musical. The addition of musicals to the Warren Players Club's programs has broadened the scope of the group and has created a wider range of duties to be performed.

This year a musical, "Damn Yankees", will open the season on October 14 and 15. These are Friday and Saturday evenings, a policy which gives a greater number of people an opportunity to attend the plays.

The Players have no trouble getting members, and inasmuch as the limit is one thousand it might be wise for you to act now if you want to assure yourself a seat for the plays in which you may not participate. The new policy is to assign seats for the season, thus eliminating the necessity for making reservations each time a production is scheduled.

The second play will be "Visit to a Small Planet". This Broadway success has a local angle. It was financed in large part by Warren people and a former Warren resident. It has been seen on tv and now is in movie form. Its date is December 9 and 10.

"Please Communicate" will be presented March 10 and 11. "Room Service" comes with spring, May 12 and 13. Short winter!

NATION'S MAIL VOLUME REACHES NEW ALL-TIME HIGH FOR PAST YEAR

A new all-time high in the nation's mail volume was reached during Fiscal Year 1960 ending June 30, which continued the steady upward trend of the past seven years at a rate which even exceeds the population growth, according to advance information from the Annual Report of the Post Office Department which has been made available to Postmaster Knabenshue.

Although subject to last minute revisions, the year's total has been estimated as 63.6 billion pieces of mail which includes about one billion pieces of parcel post. It was stated that this would mean an increase of nearly 25 per cent over the corresponding figures for 1953 when the annual volume was 50.9 billion pieces.

During this same period, it was pointed out, the revenue of the Department also has shown an impressive gain with an increase from $2,091,714,000 in Fiscal Year 1953 to $3,276,800,000 for Fiscal Year 1960.

"There is not much we can do about how much mail we have to handle from day to day or how many people are making use of the Postal Service," the Postmaster stated, "but the whole Department keeps busy in devising ways and means for doing the job not only more efficiently but more economically. As I recall it, that was the way President Eisenhower outlined the principal objectives of the Department when Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield was being sworn in back in 1953, and that's the way we have been operating ever since.

"We can't deny that we still make mistakes and that the human element still plays a vitally important part in daily operations, but the statistics in the Department's annual report offer positive proof that we are making progress on a nation-wide basis. As an example, while the mail volume showed an increase of 17 billion pieces handled annually, the employment increase during this same period amounted to only 11 per cent.

"There is perhaps no better way of demonstrating the Department's ever-improving efficiency than by showing just how steadily the annual volume handled per man-year of employment -- excluding city carriers -- has been increasing since 1953. In that year the total handled by one man was 132,000 pieces of mail. For 1960 the corresponding figure was 157,000.

"It is, of course, true that all the additional service has made it necessary to take on many new employees and that our total increased from 506,520 in 1953 to 562,868 on June 30, 1960, but as pointed out in the original 1960 report figures, the workload increase during this same period was nearly 25 per cent.

"In a recent speech on this subject by the Postmaster General, he brought out that by 1970 our population is expected to be 208,000,000 and that our annual mail volume by then will be more than 90 billion pieces. The U. S. Bureau of Standards, an entirely separate organization, estimates that our mail volume will be doubled within the next 25 years, and it all fits into the same picture."

Included among items cited by the Postmaster as recent accomplishments by the Department were the following:

1. Established the first large-scale program of automatic mail handling by machinery on a nation-wide basis.
2. Developed the "airlift" program which speeds up the delivery of approximately one letter out of every 17 on a "Space available" basis.
3. Continued with the development of faster machines for letter sorting, parcel post sorting, and for mail culling, facing and cancelling.
4. Continued with plans for a new automatic postal sub-station which will vend stamps, envelopes, post cards and writing paper, and which will have money changers for both coins and bills.

TELEVISION & RADIO

By John Crosby

What Is Dull?

I have just been watching Khrushchev on one of his milder flights of rhetoric from the rostrum of the United Nations. It was one of his attacks on Dag Hammarskjöld and there were shots of him, too, shots of Prime Minister Macmillan reacting. What a show it's been. Yet how many people have seen it? This particular bit was carried by three stations in New York, including CBS. But by how many others?

Television is so totally dedicated to triviality that we are all expected to burst into sustained applause whenever the stations or the networks perform anything in the public interest, which is what they were set up to perform in the first place. Here in New York Channel 13 is doing a great job bringing the United Nations debate to the public. Some of it is dull but only in the sense that television is supposed to be an endless parade of swooning over successions of singers, jokes, and revolver shots rather than importance.

I don't know how we managed to swallow this ball of wax to start out with. Is the true function of television to bring us the sight of a girl caressing her own skin and murmuring that she never really felt clean before? (There is more narcissism openly indulged in on television in an evening than the ancient Greeks dreamed of in their philosophy.)

Great debates is the sort of thing television ought to be doing instead of selling Kleenex. But we have been so thoroughly brain-washed that we think that any sort of reasonably important activity on television is an interruption of its real work rather than the other way around. It's as if the proper function of a road were the billboards along the way and the road was just a gadget designed so you could look at them. The great debates between Nixon and Kennedy on television -- whatever else you can say about them -- are marvelous devices to unify the country into a single unit of talk and controversy. It has given great dignity to television which seems to terribly intent on divesting itself of its importance, as if important things were somehow automatically dreary.

This directly contradicts the experience of all the other media. God knows the newspapers engage in triviality but we don't put it on the front page. The book publishers publish the memoirs of Zsa Zsa Gabor but actually they make much more money out of those of Winston Churchill. And, anyway, I find the idea that Khrushchev is dull, whereas

"December Bride" is terribly interesting, quaint, terribly quaint.

To pass to other matters, "Hooray for Love," a one-hour special presented by General Electric the other night, I thought was a lot of fun. This presented Art Carney, who will be called Mr. Television if he isn't careful; Tony Randall, a very skilled operative; Alice Ghostley; and Kenneth Nelson, all spoofing various aspects of love with glee and, above all, high style.

Among other things, these talented people did parodies on Tennessee Williams and Ingmar Bergman. Man, this is getting pretty far out for this mass audience. I assume the little old lady in Dubuque knows who Tennessee Williams is because Elizabeth Taylor was in the movie, but who is Ingmar Bergman -- Ingrid's sister? It's nice to see television treat the audience as if it has some grown-up interests, though. Art Carney talking a pseudo-Swedish with subtitles was hilarious, too.

I never thought I'd live to see the day I'd say something nice about a child actor but there is an awfully cute one named Stanley Livingston (Aw, come on, fellas. Rock Hudson isn't bad enough, we gotta have Stanley Livingston. Next'll be Lincoln Douglas. Or maybe Grant Lee) in a show called "My Three Sons." This is terribly domestic comedy in which a widower, played by Fred MacMurray, is bringing up three vari-sized sons. In this improbably household, William Frawley (you remember the guy next door in "I Love Lucy") plays the father-in-law and he does the cooking and housecleaning and is incessantly talking about his pecan fudge layer cake.

All this sounds like something that would make the average adult throw up but as a matter of fact it's quite human and very funny. At least the first one was. In that one little Stanley Livingston was being pursued by a hellcat in the second grade. "The guys call me Hot Lips Douglas," he announces gloomily to his father, who is alive with sympathy. Anyhow, it's got the jump on the field of new domestic comedies -- a crowded field -- and ought to give it a look.

The Oldest Profession

By Inez Robb

The Broadway season is off and running true to the form it has set for itself in the past half-dozen years. The prostitute with the heart of gold is again Broadway's favorite heroine. La, if prostitution is the oldest profession, then the second oldest must surely be the writing and production of plays about the trade.

"Rain" and its heroine, Sadie Thompson, may have seemed very daring a generation ago, but no longer. There is nothing subtle or implied about sin any more. The favorite Broadway MISE EN SCENE is the house of ill fame, beginning with such educational exhibits as "House of Flowers" and working up to "The World of Susie Wong".

Both made me feel a bit queasy. But everyone told me it must be something I et, as both opuses were so gay, so sophisticated, and done with such charm and sympathy. Now, I am forced to admit that both these plays were merely a beginner's course.

If any details of the operation of such houses and the conduct of their occupants have been skipped or lightly passed over in recent seasons, the first big critical hit of this season spells them out carefully and explicitly.

And, again, if the new musical, "Irma la Douce," afflicts me with squeamishness, it doubtless is something I et. For, without exception, all the New York critics have greeted it ecstatically. They have pulled out all the stops for this vehicle dealing with a prostitute, her clients, pimps, crooked police and crooked justice.

Nothing is left to the imagination in "Irma la Douce," which has already had a long life in London and seems destined for similar immortality on Broadway.

The views of "Irma la Douce" must have puzzled at least one visitor to our shores, the Irish playwright, Brendan Behan. His play, "The Hostage," also fresh from a London run and also set in a bawdy house, was damned with faint praise by the self-same critics who found "Irma" so enchanting. Behan's contribution was dismissed as "ribald", "Rabelaisian" and "shocking".

Goodness knows, neither play is for the family trade. But of the two, "Irma la Douce" was a great deal more offensive to this seasoned theatre buff. I found it a crude and blatant exercise in vulgarity from beginning to end. The word for this imported musical is "nasty" and all the bewitching talents of its English star, Elizabeth Seal, cannot save it from that label.

At least the Behan play exhibits a new creative talent and a wild vitality in the theatre, undisciplined though both gifts may be. It is not the child of decadence as is "Irma la Douce," but of a rich and lively imagination. Certainly, there are inexcusable errors of taste in both the writing and the direction of "The Hostage," but the Behan play has a validity that never touches the musical. The man who wrote it may be badly in need of having his typewriter washed out with soap, but he is gifted.

There is great promise in "The Hostage" of robust, lively work in the future. As it is Behan has written in this play a work that is half Gaelic-Sar-

CALLING PROGRAM OF MOUNT HOLYOKE

Two thousand alumnae of Mt. Holyoke College will visit graduates of the college throughout the nation between October 17 and November 11 to bring everyone up to date on the recent developments at their Alma Mater.

College life today is an exciting challenge to qualify for current honors projects and independent programs of study, combined with broad, and at the same time thorough, basic training in liberal arts subjects. Mt. Holyoke has won national recognition for heading the honor roll of U.S. colleges because of its "percentage of effectiveness" in reaching alumnae of the college.

Callers in this area are Miss Ada Coe and Mrs. Neal Donovan of Warren.

IN COLLEGES

Miss Marilyn Ruth Haer, a graduate of Warren high school and German major, has enrolled in the junior class at Gettysburg College. She is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Frederick B. Haer of 211 East st.

oyan and half Irish - "Hellzapoppin". At all odds, I would like to see his next play, which is more than I can say for "Irma's" creators.

It is my earnest hope to survive long enough to see Broadway work its way out of the red-light district. Far from being grateful for an education in those precincts, I feel rather like the little girl who was asked to review a book on elephants.

The small genius handed in a synopsis that said it all in one sentence: "This book tells me more than I want to know about elephants."

Broadway, in recent years, has been telling me far, far more than I want to know about Sadie Thompson's Belle Watling's and Mrs. Warren's profession.

Group Activities

SIGN-UP NIGHT FOR KOS-SUTH ENCAMPMENT 98 . . . of the Warren Drum and Bugle Corps, will be held next Wednesday night, in the Odd Fellows Hall (or any Wednesday practice night thereafter), for boys and girls 12 to 18 years of age from Russell, Sheffield, Tidioute, Youngsville, as well as Warren. Each young applicant should be accompanied by at least one parent.

This is a wonderful opportunity to learn to play an instrument - at no cost to the student whatsoever - under qualified instrumental instructors. Another kind of gain should not be left unconsidered by parents and youngsters alike - that is the gain in self-confidence and social poise such activity always fosters in the participant.

Being a member of Kossuth Encampment 98 is not all work, there is a lively social program in effect through the year. Parents and prospective members are assured, however, that all events scheduled on the yearly calendar of the junior drum and bugle corps, are arranged so as NOT to conflict with any school activity either scholastic, social or civic.

It is hoped that there will be a number of applicants and parents present in the Odd Fellows Hall, next Wednesday night, to take advantage of the opportunity offered. Registrations will take place from 7 to 9 p.m.

WARREN COUNTY NURSES ASSOCIATION will hold the regular monthly meeting on Monday, October 10 at 8 p.m., with the board meeting convening at 7 o'clock in the Board Room

TE LA DI O

ELECTRONIC ZANE GREY

A Western play, a sheriff and a bandit, a gun duel. Nothing new in that except for the way the script was written. TX-O, the author, is an electronic computer developed by Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the script for the Western was written by this machine.

The two-minute playlet will be presented on "Tomorrow," a new science series on CBS starting Oct. 26 at 10 p.m. with a one-hour program titled, "The Thinking Machine."

The machine was "fed" information and in a series of test runs the same situation was "shot" fifty times and the machine came up with a different climax every time. Which proves that even a machine can script a Western little different than the king we have unwillingly become so accustomed to . . . all it needs is a good man, a bad man, a heroine, a horse and a six-shooter . . . all kinds of situations can result and usually do . . . except the machine sometimes lets the bad man kill the good man and even lets them shoot each other.

YOU, TOO, CAN BE A CONTESTANT

The Price Is Right, an NBC morning program, has a new sweepstakes feature in which one contestant each month will be selected from postcard entries. So now, for the price of a 3-cent post card, all America can compete on TV for lavish prizes.

WICU-TV TO GO ABC

WICU-TV, Channel 12, Erie, will switch its primary affiliation from the NBC network to the ABC network next May, it is reported.

WICU-TV is presently a secondary affiliated ABC station with its primary affiliation with NBC.

This is the eighth station in four months to switch its primary affiliation to the American Broadcasting Company, long the infant of the networks but now showing signs of growth and expansion.

For area viewers this may not be a progressive step since WICU is giving us the best reception of the three NBC channels we receive.

SOAP OPERA ESPANOL

Spanish-speaking housewives in the Los Angeles area have a new soap opera to weep over. It is a 50-episode Mexican saga titled "Pecado Mortal" or "Mortal Sin."

The tape-recorded show is Mexican television industry's bid to capture an export market for its video products. It hopes to sell not only soap opera but also musicals, dramas, sports events and variety shows in both the U.S. and Latin America.

Mexico's 35-million population owns a half-million TV sets.

FROM THE HORSES MOUTH

Two Miami television camera-men spent six days in prison last week . . . shooting footage for a documentary film which CBS will present on its FYI series.

The men spent the time at the Florida State Prison at Raiford, interviewing prisoners and guards, to tell the story about prisons and prison life, the good and bad side of it.

QUEST

A major new series of full-hour NBC Special Projects television events, in preparation for more than a year, will spotlight distant peoples in dramatic transition or crises and the dedicated men and women who are trying to lead them into 20th century or guide them safely through its convulsions.

The new venture is titled "Quest" and some of the personalities to be included will be Betty Elliott, a non-sectarian Christian missionary to the Stone Age Auka Indians in the jungles of Ecuador, whose husband was one of five young American missionaries killed by these natives; Santoch Banerjee, a relief worker among the Tibetans driven from their homes by Chinese Communists; Eleanor Wilson, teacher and sailor who ministered to Pacific Islanders displaced by nuclear tests; Dr. Gordon Seagrave, famed "Burma Surgeon" of war and peace; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sadler, young Americans whose efforts are creating a written language for hundreds of thousands of African tribesmen in Northern Rhodesia; perhaps, Dr. Albert Schweitzer at his hospital in the new Cagon republic; and many others.

The series will not be televised until next year.

COMING

IMOGENE COCA will star in Ludwig Bemelmans' modern children's classic, "Madeline," to be seen on the Shirley Temple Show Sunday, Oct. 16.

CHAMPIONSHIP BRIDGE with Charles Goren will return to WKBW Sunday, Oct. 16, at 11:30 a.m. Chico Marx will appear with Goren for the first telecast of the season.

THE WITNESS, new series this fall on the CBS network, will present a version of the Black Sox Scandals of 1919 which DuPont Show of the Month had scheduled but canceled when baseball commissioner Ford Frick objected. Ralph Meeker will play the role of Shoeless Joe Jackson, one of the Chicago White Sox players banished from baseball for accepting bribes to throw games. The drama is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 3.

HELEN HAYES and Farley Granger will appear in dramatic roles on the Bell Telephone Hour special Friday, Nov. 25 when Tchaikovsky's music will be featured.

MONTHLY BENEFIT RIGHTS

This is the third in a series of eight articles by Howard H. Gift, District Manager, Social Security Administration, about new changes in the Social Security law. About 1200 previously ineligible people in Warren and Chautauqua Counties now may become entitled to Social Security benefits.

 A provision of the new social security amendments changes the rules for determining how earnings from work affect a person's right to receive monthly benefits. However, the following rules remain unchanged:

1. Anyone earning $1200 or less during a year will still be entitled to receive his full social security check for every month of the year.
2. Anyone who has reached his 72nd birthday will still be able to receive his full social security check for every month no matter how much he works and how much he earns.
3. A person will not have any deduction from his social security check for any month that his earnings as an employee are $100 or less or, if he is self-employed, for any month that he does not do substantial work in his business.

The change made by the recent amendments affects the social security beneficiary whose earnings from employment or self-employment go over $1200 a year. For earnings from $1200 to $1500 he will give up $1.00 in social security benefits for each $2.00 of earnings. For any earnings over $1500 he will give up $1.00 of social security benefits for every $1.00 of earnings. Under the old rule, which remains in effect until the end of 1960, a person is required to give up his entire monthly social security check for every $80 or part of $80 by which his earnings go over $1200. The change in the new law eliminates the possibility that a person may lose considerably more in social security than he earns from his work -- a possibility that existed under the old law.

There are 11.1 million people of 65 years of age or over who are either receiving regular monthly benefits or would be receiving them if the family breadwinner was not working. Of these, about 2 million will be affected by the change in the law on the payment of social security checks to people who are working. 1.4 million of them have not applied for payments because they are making over $2080 a year, the annual earnings figure that generally prevents a person from receiving any social security checks under the old law. Anyone who may be eligible for social security benefits but who has not yet made a claim for them because he is working should call at the social security office to inquire about the effect of the new change on his rights.

 The fourth article in this series concerns amendment affecting employment of parents by children.

Your Forest Ranger

By Larry Stotz

CHECKS AND BALANCES

The deer that hangs head down from a pole suspended between two trees in front of a bow hunter's tent on the Allegheny National Forest is as much a product of the soil as the pole and the trees that hold it aloft. Under multiple-use and sustained yield management trees for timber, and wildlife for recreation can be grown on the same parcel of land. The tree depends upon productive soil, water, mineral nutrients, carbon dioxide in the air, sunlight and growing space to survive. If any of these essential elements are missing the tree cannot pick itself up by the roots and move to an area where all of them are available. In turn, wildlife is dependent upon forest vegetation for its food and for shelter for its young. It is equally dependent upon it for a place to hide from its enemies. Although it has the gift of motion denied to trees it too may find itself inexorably bound to the soil from which it came. White-tailed deer may spend their entire life cycle within a relatively small area, and will often starve to death when food is scarce rather than migrate to areas of abundance. This has led many well meaning sportsmen to clamor for artificial feeding programs for deer when the herd has outstripped its natural food supply.

When nature's balance is upset, the entire community of plants and animals suffers. The multiple - use principle of management provides the checks and balances that protect the water user, the lumberman, the sportsman, and other recreationists.

Under this system of management there are benefits for all. The lumberman is assured of future crops of timber from forests that are protected from over-browsing of young trees by wildlife. The water user can depend upon silt-free reservoirs to supply him with power and municipal water when timber is harvested with due respect for watershed values. The recreationist will have clear streams to fish in, wild game to hunt that is in good flesh, and quiet places filled with scenic grandeur dedicated to wilderness living.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

PITTSBURGH, -- In New York, the cops picked up a diplomat wallowing hip-deep in smuggled heroin. At the United Nations, Nikita hollered at Dag and Hammarskjold yelled back and Nehru had a thing or two to say about the future of civilization. Rockets whirled through space, snooping into affairs on the moon, Lyndon called Nixon a fool and Nixon said Kennedy was another. Only in Pittsburgh, it seemed, did they preserve a sense of proportion. Announced the eight-column banner on page one:

"Yankees, Bucs in last workout."

It was comforting to discover a town that puts first things first.

At Forbes Field the noonday sun was bright where the white-flanneled Pirates played pitch-catch, glancing apprehensively over their shoulders lest they be trampled by the literary hordes that swarmed and swirled and habbled.

For an hour or more, Pittsburgh's hardfaced, soft-talking manager, Danny Murtaugh, stood trapped in the mob, giving bright answers to stupid questions. Then the Yankees came on in their

PLAN SCOUT CAMPAIGN.

Leaders of the Boy Scout movement in the Warren area met at the Blue and White restaurant last Thursday evening to formulate plans for the annual Boy Scout fund-raising campaign. The drive, which is slated to commence on Oct. 28, will be conducted only in areas not covered by either the Corry or Warren Community Chests as the Boy Scout organization is a participating member of the Community Chest.

Standing: Scout Executive H. Bruce Ayars, R. E. Huber, Judge Alexander C. Flick, Jr., W. R. Robinson, R. H. McCarthy, G. W. Buerkle, Clarence Johnson, and Raymond Briggs.

gray rompers, and for another hour the throng milled about Casey Stengel fielding fragments of the jabberwocky he has been broadcasting ever since the Yankees made their pennant sure.

It happens every fall, somewhere, but thirty-three years had passed since it happened in Pittsburgh.

Up in the seats behind third base, lazing and chatting in the warm sunshine, were a couple of guys who managed the Pirates in earlier times. There was Pie Traynor, who played third base here when the Yankees sacked Pittsburgh four times in a row in the World Series of 1927. There was Fred Haney, who struggled to teach the rudiments of baseball to the juvenile delinquents Branch Rickey was bringing in from the early 50's.

"We were plumb tickered out," Traynor was saying of the 1927 team that staggered into Pittsburgh's last championship in a desperate race with the Cardinals, Giants, and Cubs. He started replaying the big games of the closing weeks, recalling the plays as though they'd been made thirty-three minutes, not years, ago.

"We were all underweight," he said, "faces drawn, and we just couldn't go any farther. Those Yankees, they'd been twelve games ahead all the way and they were fat and rested. You shoulda seen the paunches on Ruth and Gehrig and Hoyt --" PITTSBURGH'S YESTERDAYS

Beans Reardon, the reformed umpire, came by, and Babe Herman, the incorrigible outfielder of the old Dodgers, and Buzzy Bavasi and Fresco Thompson, of the new Dodgers, and the talk went on and on. Down on the field, Mr. Stengel was getting his second wind, or maybe third.

"When Fred here was managing that team of midgets," Traynor was saying about Haney, "I counted forty-five games when Pittsburgh didn't score before the seventh inning, and then they never got two runs, just one at a time. I remember --"

"You weren't still here, were you," a guy asked Haney, "when Gene Freese forgot to run to second base?" That was one of those games that cling to memory like a cocklebur, for in the eleventh inning the Pirates scored the winning run on a hit to center field but young Freese, the runner on first, was forced at second for the third out. The run didn't count, and the Phillies won.

"I wasn't here?" Haney said. "I was right out there, chasing the burrhead who hit the ball, because he ran to the bench instead of first base. I went two steps down in the dugout after him and pushed him to first base and the umpire said 'Well, I see you finally got him here.' Then I looked up and they were making the play at second."

ART'S NINE OGRES

That's how they played ball here just a few years ago, and now the Pirates are going for the championship of the world and nobody scoffs at their prospects of winning it. Least of all the Yankees.

"You're pitching the first game for New York, right?" a television interviewer asked Art Ditmar as the Yankee plane was unloading yesterday.

"That's right."

"You've had a good season, right?"

"Best I ever had in baseball."

"Which of the Pirates do you fear most?"

"Right now," Ditmar said, "I fear all nine 'em."

ALL COUNTY TEAMS IN ACTION SATURDAY

The power of the 1960 Sheffield Wolverines will be tested this Saturday when the charges of Lou DeRubies, yet to be defeated or ties in four games this season, will meet their strong county rival, the Youngsville Eagles, in the "Biggest Little Town on the Map." Sheffield's supremacy in the Allegheny Mountain League has yet to be seriously challenged as last Saturday they rang up their fourth loop triumph, a 48-21 win over Smethport. The Eagles, possessing a 1-2-1 log, will attempt to cage the snarling Wolverines. Both elevens will be at full strength for the game.

The Northern Area Knights will also engage their strongest adversary on the Eisenhower field tomorrow as the Silver Creek team brings a very determined aggregation into Pennsylvania. The Creekers are still smarting from their 6-0 loss to the Knights last season, which cost them the Northwestern Football Conference title.

NA suffered its first setback in two years Saturday as they were stopped by Cassadaga Valley, another conference rival, 14-6. The Creekers on the other hand continued to chalk up victories for the young football season. They murdered a Westfield team, 62-0.

In Warren the Dragons will host a first opponent in the Meadville Bulldogs, who last week scored 25 points against a large and strong Erie Tech team. The game will be just a part of the Autumn Festival, the event which has taken the place of the Homecoming festivities. During half-time of the game, the queen candidates will be introduced to the audience, and one will be selected to reign over the Autumn Festival dance to be held that evening.

Warren will probably be without the services of senior quarterback John Wooster, who has suffered from an ankle injury since the opening of the Oil City game. Junior John Larson has been working behind Wooster in that position, but Saturday's starter there is not yet known. Jack Siggins, the big lineman of the Blue and White, who missed action in the Oil City game because of torn ligaments, will be suited for the Meadville contest, and will more than likely see plenty of action.

So far in 1960 the Bulldogs have lost to Greenville and Erie East by identical scores, 19-6, and dropped two other contests, to Franklin by a 27-7 score, and to the Erie Tech eleven, 40-25. However, each of these opponents is fielding a strong crew this season, the Franklin Knights still dominating play in Section Two with an unbeaten record to date.

BEATY WINS, 26-0

The Beatty Junior high squad evened its season's record at one win and one loss yesterday afternoon with a 26-0 trouncing of the Lincoln Junior high of Jamestown. The locals hit paydirt twice in the first stanza, and once each in the third and fourth periods.

A Vinny Pace - to - Bob Arnold aerial, good for five yards, accounted for the first TD, and the same pair teamed up for the PAT. Ken Peterson added the second six-pointer with a 20-yard scamper in the same quarter.

Pace crossed the goal line on runs of 55 and 5 yards in the last two quarters of the ball game. He is playing in the quarterback slot for Deane Passmore's forces ahead of Peterson and Chuckie Kurz at the tailback positions and Chuck Brown at full.

Passmore stated that his boys were "vastly improved" from their first showing against Jefferson last Thursday when they were beaten 13-6.

Observer Picks...

NFL - The Giants to trip the Steelers, the Eagles to edge the Cards, Dallas to scalp the Redskins, the Colts to ride over the Packers, the Bears to rout the Rams, and the 49ers to outdo the Lions.

AFL - The LA Chargers to skin the Buffalo Bills, the Titans to lace the Houston Oilers, and Dallas to smother Oakland.

College - Purdue to trap the Wisconsin Badgers, the Fightin' Irish to defeat North Carolina, Northwestern to rebound over Minnesota, Missouri to shoot down the Air Force, Kansas to thump Iowa State, Iowa to strap Michigan State, Oregon State to jolt Indiana, Ohio State to powder Illinois, Texas to down neighbor Oklahoma, Navy to sink SMU, Florida to squeeze by Rice, Vanderbilt to be beaten by Ole Miss, LSU to just get by Georgia Tech, Kentucky to clobber Marshall, Army to thwart Penn State, and Syracuse to remain undefeated with a victory over Holy Cross.

Last week's results: 20 right, 4 wrong, and 1 tie; percentage to date: .751.
